Creating Prosperity

The Internet is full of information on how to create prosperity, so why add to all that's out there in The Spiritual Path newsletter? Because I think as people on our spiritual path we often forget that prosperity is a helpmate on our journey, not a hindrance. On my desk I have a graphic of the pine trees in my backyard. Printed on the photo are the words, "Money is a tool that allows me to serve." I keep it on my desk to remind myself. To learn more, scroll down to my article "Why Create Prosperity?"

On the way

be sure to read "Phillip's Wisdom" to know what my spirit guide has to say about money, and to obtain his affirmation for our intent around money, and then read "Ways of Service" for

Phillip's Wisdom

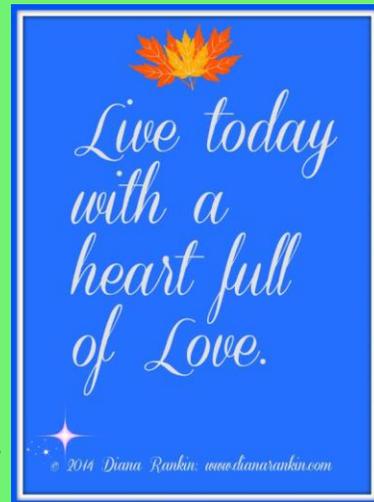

There are those in your plane who consider money and living a spiritual path in conflict with one another. This is misguided and leads to more poverty and belief in lack.

Money is a commodity that has the potential to aid many.

There is no evil in money, only in the thoughts of greed. When the power of money is used to feed and clothe the hungry, how can one not know the goodness of money? When money is used to build shelters for those without, how can one question the usefulness of money?

It is not money within itself that is either good or evil, but the intent of the one who holds the money for money has power that can be used to help all beings. This then is the intent that should be held: Let money serve my life that I may then use it to help serve others.

Phillip is Diana's Spirit Guide and communicator.

A Word About The Spiritual Path and Intuition
August 2014

Practice 1

About ten years ago, Steve Pavlina started an experiment, a $1,000,000 experiment (Million Dollar Experiment <http://www.stevepavlina.com/million-dollar-experiment.htm>). He wondered if it was possible to make $1 million through intention, guided by intuition and synchronicity. He decided to find out and invited others to join him.

Every day for 60 seconds participants are to sit quietly with this intention: In an easy and relaxed manner, in a healthy and positive way, in its own perfect time, for the highest good of all, I intend $1 million to come into my life.

To date, according to the Million Dollar Experiment site, $5,677,075.71 has been manifested. You might want to give it a try. We'll hold the energy for each other.

Practice 2

In a blank check register, pay yourself in "energy money" $200 the first day. You must spend all the money, so write down how much you are spending and where you are spending it. For example, you might designate 10 percent as a donation to a spiritual source; another 10 percent for a wealth-building account; or you might buy groceries, theatre tickets; or pay a bill, etc.

The second day, you double the amount you pay yourself, so you'll have $400 to spend. The third day you'll have $800, and so on. As you go along, any money issues you have will start to come up. They sure did for me.

It was around the $8,000 mark when I told a friend I was getting bored with the experiment. He asked me what I was "buying" (remember this is all energy money; not "real" currency). I said that I was making donations, saving some, paying the mortgage, vet bills, electrical bill, etc., etc., etc. He was yawning by the time I finished.

"What are you buying that's fun?" he asked.

I had to think about that for a few minutes. "I bought some books," I said. I like to read.

"Buy a $200 bottle of wine," he suggested.

I nearly choked. "I hardly ever drink," I sputtered. "Plus, I can't imagine spending $200 on a bottle of wine."

"That's the problem," he said.

And as he smiled, I got it. It wasn't about buying a $200 bottle of wine. It was about having the consciousness of prosperity, and I didn't have it. I wasn't having any fun with money.

Somewhere in my belief system, I had the idea that I had to work hard for money and I wasn't allowed to be frivolous. Ha!

Although I'm still not frivolous with money, I do have a better balance in my life of work and play. I've also had to learn to play games with myself around money to avoid getting bored. Although money may never be my strongest motivation in how I live my life, I have learned to respect it more and in turn respect myself more.

Practice 3

Give and receive. You've heard me say it before that giving and receiving are like breathing in and breathing out. On the in breath, we receive; on the out breath, we give. We can't have one without the other. When we give we signal to the Universe that we have plenty to give because we know that we are always provided all we need, and so we are.

Why Create Prosperity?

If your service as a spiritual worker in this life is to spend your days in prayer and contemplation and others are taking care of your monetary needs, don't read on. However, if you must take care of your own monetary needs while being of service to others, or if you believe spiritual workers should not take money for their services, please keep reading.

I've heard it said it's more spiritual for spiritual workers to give away their services rather than accept money in exchange for that which they provide- psychic readings, books, energy work, healings, etc. There is a lack of awareness in that type of statement that just makes me shudder. The only way we can help others is if we are first taking care of ourselves, and in the society where most of us live that takes money.

Maslow's Hierarchy of Needs teaches us that our human self must first meet basic needs before we reach higher levels where we are free to study and gain the wisdom to be spiritual guides. Age is not a factor in reaching higher planes. Children who feel safe and have their basic needs met may often be spiritual teachers, but this is not what I'm addressing. I'm speaking about those of us who pay our rent and food bills and make donations to help others because we have clients who believe we are worth receiving money in exchange for what we give to them be it guidance, healing, words of inspiration, body work, or other services and products.

And too often there seems to be a disconnect when it comes to dollars and sense both among spiritual workers and among those who benefit from the actions of the spiritual worker. Spiritual workers must believe we are giving value to others and that this exchange of energy is of value to the other. And those of us who receive from the spiritual worker must believe we are receiving a value, and be grateful to be able to pay for that exchange of value with dollars.

Because most spiritual workers love what we do and are grateful to be working in the area that comes naturally to us because this is our calling, we may undermine ourselves when it comes to prosperity. Money is not our motivation; helping others is, but we must remind ourselves that prosperity buys us the freedom to continue serving if we allow it to. Money is not to burden our lives with too many material possessions, but to provide us with that which feeds our lives so that we live with the richness of life and not its worry. The truth is that no matter how many times we teach others to stay in gratitude for all we have, it's harder to practice what we preach if we wake in the middle of the night worried about how the electricity is going to get paid.

Many of the spiritual workers-readers, writers, healers, body workers, etc.-I know are dedicated to helping others and work long hours to make ends meet. When not working we are usually studying with other teachers via workshops, webinars, or the old fashion way, with books. Many spiritual workers have a second job, which leaves less time to work with clients; some have spouses who contribute to the household income; while others have multiple streams of income such as readers who have speaking engagements, write books, create sacred jewelry, etc. And all are generous with their time, energy, and money and always ready to help another.

The spiritual community is a rather small portion of the general population, which means there are fewer of us to support those who dedicate their lives to serving us. Here are a 10 ways we can help so those who are dedicated to being of service to all can continue this sacred work:

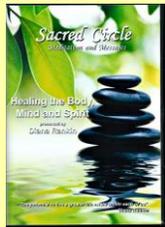

- Tell your friends about a reader, coach, body worker, or other spiritual worker who helped you.
- If a book touched your heart and helped you grow, post a review on Facebook, Amazon, or other sites.
- Write in the comments section on blogs to mention how an article helped you and send the article to your friends.
- Make an appointment with a spiritual worker, with gratitude for the value exchange.
- Attend workshops, seminars, book readings, and other events held in your local area, and help to promote them.

Healing the Pain

- Send a note or email to the spiritual worker who helped you and let that person know that it's okay to quote you in a testimonial.
- Make a donation to a spiritual worker or cause that has helped you think and grow.
- Respect the time and privacy of the spiritual worker. If you ask for help, send a check.
- Add a link on your website to spiritual workers, books, events, etc. that you believe in and will help others.
- Say thank you. Spiritual workers thrive on appreciation.

And to each of you, thank you for using your life to help others and for supporting all who do the same.
